(max.500 word)

The conference spanned five days, consisting of a three-day main event followed by two days of workshops. Our paper was presented during a poster session on the second day. Throughout the week, I connected with several researchers specializing in game-solving within large, imperfect information games.

Notably, I discussed potential future collaborations with several prominent figures in the field, including:

Carnegie Mellon University: Tuomas Sandholm, Ioannis Anagnostides, Samuel Sokota, Emanuel Tewolde, and Ratip Emin Berker.

MIT: Gabriele Farina, Brian Hu Zhang, and Sobhan Mohammadpour.

University of Alberta: Nathan Sturtevant.

During the poster session I was able to discuss our research with over 30 attendees from various international universities.
